Earth Hour 2009 is set to switch off the globe. Already 535 cities, and double the number of countries that participated in 2008, are committed. With hundreds more cities expected to sign up to switch off in the coming months, Earth Hour 2009 is setting the platform for an unprecedented global mandate for action on climate change.

WWF's EARTH HOUR SPARKS WORLDWIDE UNITY

Nations are now seeing the global economic downturn as an opportunity to steer their economies toward safer sustainable futures. The campaign, which hopes to reach one billion people in 1 000 cities around the world, asks individuals , businesses and governments to switch off lights for just one hour on Saturday March 28 at 8.30pm - to create a platform of support for climate change.

Cities committed for Earth Hour include Moscow, Los Angeles, Las Vegas, London, Hong Kong, Sydney, Rome, Manila, Oslo, Cape Town, Warsaw, Lisbon, Singapore, Istanbul, Mexico City, Toronto, Dubai and Copenhagen.

Earth Hour 2009, will witness some of the most recognisable landmarks on the planet extinguish their lights in support of decisive action on global warming. Icons switching off include - the world's tallest hotel building - the Burj Dubai; the tallest free standing structure in the Americas - the CN Tower in Toronto; Moscow's Federation Tower; and in Rome - Quirinale - the Italian President's official residence. In the southern hemisphere - its tallest tower Auckland's Sky Tower will go dark, as will the iconic sails of the Sydney Opera House in Australia, and South Africa's flood lit Table Mountain.

Earth Hour sends your message to world leaders meeting in Copenhagen for the Conference on Climate Change in 2009. Executive Director of Earth Hour Global, Andy Ridley, said, " 2009 is the year we decide the future of the earth. It is the year the world finally agrees on a plan to massively reduce carbon emissions across the globe. This is the time to invest in new ways of doing business in a new low carbon economy. We must all step over the line together. The sum of our actions today can change history and secure the future of our planet. "
